

REED SMOOT'S NOT DISCOURAGED

Senator-elect Will Go to Washington Next Week.

"TRAITORS!" SAYS LOOSE

BRANDS SIGNERS OF PROTEST AS GUILTY OF BASE PERFDY.

Protests will not change the plans of Apostle Reed Smoot. Mr. Smoot will go to Washington next week and present his credentials for a seat in the United States senate for the first time of Utah at the proper time. Opposition will not deter him. He will proceed as if nothing had occurred to challenge the possibility of his success. Mr. Smoot himself is responsible for the foregoing assurance.

Senator-elect Smoot was found last evening at the home of Mrs. Chloe Elledge, his mother-in-law, on East First South street. He was preparing to leave for his home in Provo after putting in a busy day. Mr. Smoot denied that he had a conference yesterday with the first presidency of the church. It was reported on the streets that he was closeted with the presidents until late in the afternoon. A visit to the office and to other places where he is usually apt to call when in town failed to develop his presence.

It was expected that he would leave on one of the early afternoon trains for his home, but he did something of his work in time to leave the city before 3 o'clock. Mr. Smoot appeared to be in good humor when found last evening, and smiled pleasantly when questioned regarding his plans for the future. He said:

Protest Makes No Difference.

"The protest as published in The Herald this morning will make no difference with my plans. I expect to read it more carefully when I go back on the train tonight. I shall go to Washington and present my credentials just as I have intended to do. I have outlined no plans for the future. I can't tell what I do until I get to Washington. I expect to go some time next week, but have not decided on a date. I will have to see what the situation is there."

"Do you anticipate any opposition?" "I really don't know what the situation is there. There may be some opposition. I presume something of his kind will come up, but I don't know anything about it. I expect to take my seat in the senate, and do not look for any serious interference. I matter reason why there should be. Nothing can be brought against me excepting that I am a member of the Mormon church."

Has Gentile Friends.

"In a business sense I have never questioned whether those with whom I have come in contact were Mormons or Gentiles. Some of my warmest friends are among the Gentiles, and I have always dealt honestly and fairly with every one. The statement made in one of the papers that I came up today and was closeted with the president is untrue. I came up last night and went to a party. This morning I attended to several pressing business matters which needed my attention, and a large share of my time this morning was taken up by the executive board of the woolen mills."

"In all the business interests with which I am connected there are always Gentiles and no matter how the church question is entirely eliminated. I never inquire whether a man is Mormon or Gentile if I have dealings with him and I will not perceive how it can enter here."

Loose Roasts Signers.

State Senator C. E. Loose, who managed Apostle Smoot's campaign before the legislature, voiced the sentiment of the apostles when he said yesterday with reference to the protest:

"The signers of the protest are merely trying to besmirch the fair name of Utah," said Loose. "They are basely slandering the state in which they live. Their statements with reference to bad faith on the polygamy question are false. If Senator Smoot could be as false to the interests of his country as he is to the interests of his state, I would do everything in my power to keep him from being seated. But he is incapable of such perfidious and traitorous conduct."

"I am not a Mormon, so I am able to speak without prejudice. I know Reed Smoot well enough to know his church connections will not interfere with his duty towards his country. He will be true to his country and his oath of office. I regard him as being as true a patriot as I am, and that is saying a whole lot for I will take off my hat to no man when it comes to devotion to my country."

ELECTRICITY AND MUSIC.

Added Charm to the Reception in Christensen's Hall.

In the blinding glare of innumerable electric globes the members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and their friends danced the hours away last night during the inspiring music of Christensen's orchestra. The decorations were beautiful. At each end of the stage were two enormous stars of electric lights. Between them was a scroll which flashed out a purple "Welcome." At the other end of the hall, opposite the stars, were two large lanterns of electric lights, which flashed out a purple "Welcome." Between the figures orange lights formed the letters "I. B. E. W." From the wall figures of electric lights in the form of a star and a circle of colored lights against the ceiling were graceful festoons of colored cloths heavily spangled with electric lights. The palm trees were studded with colored lights and even the trunks of the trees were richly illuminated. Electrical fans at regular intervals threw out cool breezes and added to the comfort of the dancers. The street leading to the hall was also brilliantly illuminated. The money received from the reception will be used for the expenses of the international convention of electrical workers, to be held here next September. There are 20,000 members of the order and it is expected that they will be represented by 500 delegates.

PIONEER PASSES AWAY

Samuel H. Hill Succumbs to a Severe Attack of Pneumonia.

Samuel H. Hill, manager of the Cunningham company and one of the pioneer settlers of the city, died at his home, 157 South Second West street, last night. Pneumonia was the cause of his death. Mr. Hill came to these valleys in the early '50s and became a prominent man in public affairs. He was one of the pioneer settlers and a member of the constitutional convention. He was well known throughout the state and the news of his sudden death will be a shock to his many friends and acquaintances.

Mr. Hill was taken sick only six days ago with a cold which he contracted in the state of Colorado. He never cold snap. The cold developed into pneumonia and for the past day or two it was evident that he could not survive the attack. The end came about 10:30 last night.

Mr. Hill's career was a varied one, such as only an early settler of an untamed and undeveloped country would have. Coming here when these valleys were little more than trackless deserts, he added his energy and ability to that of those who had settled here and was always foremost in any undertaking that looked to the development of the country. He followed the life of the soldier; he helped construct the railroad that opened up train traffic across the continent, and finally came to the city as manager of one of the foremost business concerns of the city.

Mr. Hill was born in Canada West, Dec. 23, 1850, to which place his father had emigrated from Scotland. In his early childhood his parents embraced Mormonism and immigrated to the United States, settling at Nauvoo. Mr. Hill's father came here with the second train of immigrants, but the boy remained in Illinois, securing an education in the schools there. In 1851 he crossed the plains to the City of the Saints, driving an ox team across the trackless plains and through the mountains. The company he accompanied carried large herds of buffalo, which caused them much trouble on account of their cattle, and they passed through many camps of Indians, but escaped without any molestation from the dusky inhabitants of the plains. On the way here Mr. Hill had his leg broken by being run over by a cart, but the injury had healed by the time he arrived in these valleys.

In 1857 Mr. Hill and others engaged themselves in the work of establishing mail stations between Leavenworth, Kan., and this city. In 1862 he joined the army as a cavalryman and was mustered out in 1864. He returned here and in 1868 engaged, with Brigham Young, in the construction of the Union Pacific through Utah, remaining at the work until the last spike in the transcontinental road was driven at Promontory. He then became connected with the Utah Central and remained with that road for several years. When Utah applied for statehood he was a member of the constitutional convention.

In 1890 he became associated with the Cunningham company and remained with them to the time of his death. The funeral will be held Friday at 2 p. m. at the funeral home at the residence of the family. The remains may be viewed at the family residence from 12 m. to 1 p. m.

NOT IN POLITICS.

In yesterday morning's Herald the name of H. Hill, secretary of the Rocky Mountain Bell Telephone company, appeared as one of the signers of the petition against the seating of Reed Smoot in the United States senate. George Y. Wallace, president of the company, stated yesterday that he wished it understood that the company was not in politics with any one, and that the fact of Mr. Hill's signing the petition was in no wise an indication that the company was a company took any side whatever in politics.
